BASE BALL NOTES

The opening games of the District of Coumbia tennis championship were played esterday on the courts of the Bachelors' Club, on M street northwest, and a most uccessful start was made, the contests being close and exciting, and the enthusiasm displayed by the large crowd of spectators was most marked. The greatest interest centers around John C. Davidson's work, as he has won two championships, and should he come out ahead in the present tourney he will become the owner of the handsome trophy offered by the Bachclors' Club.

spect Contracts of Minors. P. T. Powers, president of the Eastern League, and also president of the new organization of minor leagues, has sent a letter, dated September 30, to the presidents of the National and American League clubs, in which he says:

notice from President Young that the national agreement will be abrogated and terminated by the National League on September 30, 1901, and not again renewed. While such sudden and arbitrary action was entirely unexpected, and while by many considered unwise for the best interests of professional base ball and a great injustice to the minor leagues, which have always been loyal to the national agree-ment, it is not the purpose of this letter to criticise the action of the National League in this matter, but simply to acquaint you with the fact that in consequence of the National League's abrogation of the na-tional agreement, the following leagues of professional base ball clubs have banded together for mutual protection and organ-ized an entirely independent association, under the name of the National Association of Professional Base Ball Leagues, of which I have the honor to be president. The membership of this new organization is composed of eleven leagues, representing the Western League, the Eastern League, the Western Association, the Indiana, Iowa and Illinois leagues, the New York State League, the Connecticut State League, the Southern League, the New England League,

While it is to be regretted that a base ball war now exists between the National and American leagues, yet the minor leagues are in no way parties to it or redesire to remain neutral we respectfully ap-peal to and request that the individual club members of each of the National and American leagues express their willingness as individual clubs to respect the reserve and contractual rights of the minor league clubs with their players, the minor league clubs, members of the National Association of Professional Base Ball Clubs, to re-ciprocate by respecting the reserve and contractual rights of the club members of its own interests, yet an honorable respect for each other's contracts and rights seems so proper, fair and necessary for the good repute of professional base ball that as president of the National Association of Professional Base Ball Leagues I am prompted to make this proposition with the hope that a sufficient number, if not all, of the individual club members of the two warring National and American leagues warring National and American leagues will co-operate with the National Associa-tion of Professional Base Ball Leagues on these important and essential business

EASY FOR GANS.

Handler's championship aspirations were burst like a soap bubble last night at the Trenton Athletic Club by Joseph Gans, the colored light weight from Baltimore. The Newark fighter was put to sleep after little more than two minutes' work in the first round, or, to be exact, in two minutes and twenty-four seconds. Before the deciding punch was de-time limit and tried hard its connect with the negro. But Gans was wary, nd after a little fiddling he shot another right smash to Handler's jaw. For the third time the Newarker fell to the floor. He was almost gone when he arose, and a quick feint, followed by a crashing right, did the trick.

District Bowling League Reorganises The District Bowling League held a successful meeting last night in the rooms of the Saengerbund, all but one of the clubs in last season's championship race being represented. This absentee was the Columbia Bowling Club, and as it has disbanded it was decided to play the coming season with six clubs. Committees on rules and schedule were appointed, with directions to report at the next meeting, to be held Oc-tober 9. The following clubs were repre-sented: Y. M. C. A., Jolly Fat Men, Saen-gerbund, Carroll Institute, Golden Eagle and South Washington Business Men.
After a pleasant discussion of the prospects for the coming season the following officers were elected: President, Harry C.

C. Stiles of the Saengerbund; Charles Buscher of the Jolly Fat Men, vice president; C. G. Dougherty of the Y. M. C. A., secretary; George T. Cox, Carroll Institute, treasurer, and E. C. They thus needed to raise their inning yesterday to 236 runs to win. They were, however, unable to do this.

Jimmie Manning is certainly booking a winner for Washington. He might take the pick of the country for that town and not be able to have a look in for the championship after July 4. It's a lovely spring village, but for a long summer campaign will not do. It may be the water that affects the boys, and it may be meat. The fact is that Washington has always wound up well down the list, with the exception of one season in a minor league, when it won the championship. BOOMING HYATTSVILLE.

Public Meeting Addressed by Prominent Men of Washington. Special Correspondence of The Evening Star.

HYATTSVILLE, Md., October 1, 1901. The public meeting of the Hyattsville board of trade was held last evening at the Masonic Hall. Mr. N. A. Dunning, president of the board, presided, with Mr. E. A. Fuller as secretary. Mr. Dunning addressed the assemblage, setting forth the purpose for which the board of trade was organized. He cited all the advantages the town affords, and said the community could be built up in every way, and that it was the board's sanguine hope that this will be done. At the close of his remarks

Mr. Dunning introduced Mr. B. H. Warner of the Washington Board of Trade.

After the applause which greeted him had subsided Mr. Warner spoke in favorable terms of all the suburbs of Washington, in Hyattsville. Noting the conditions of the capital city, he said that one drawback in particular was that the government employe took very little interest in the welfare of the city, and that it was those people who are in business for themselves who boomed the town. He cited the factory of the Royal Health Food Company, recently established here, as being a likely nucleus for similar concerns. He declared that a man needed to be in a race to make progress. Mr. Warner said he had read Washington about a hundred years ago for the same purpose that actuates the Hyattsville body—that of building up busiway of the betterment of Washington ville had splendid facilities for operating machinery; cited the fine variety of water that can be obtained here, and said that the water of the District could not be compared with it. The speaker made sugges be advertised, stating that the possibilities offered here were as good as could be found anywhere. He described the growth of the city of Indianapolis, Ind., in the last decade, and spoke of the results attained Business Men's Association of Washington He added that the Board of Trade of Washington may justly claim the honor of securing large appropriations from Congress which the city has received, and securing large appropriations from Con-gress which the city has received, and that the board stood before Congress as a representative body or a large citizens' as sociation. In closing Mr. Warner said that with the interest manifested he did not see why Hyattsville should not progress.

Upon the motion of Dr. Joseph R. Owens, president of the city council of this town, a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Warner. Mr. George H. Harries, also of the Wash ngton Board of Trade, next addressed the meeting, being introduced by President Dunning. Mr. Harries cited the advantages offered by the town and spoke of Washington in similar terms as did Mr. Washington in similar terms as did Mr. Warner. He declared emphatically that the Board of Trade of Washington is most willing to help the Hyattsville body in every way. At the conclusion of his remarks Mr. Harries was loudly applauded. Dr. Joseph R. Owens addressed the meeting, referring to the opportunities offered business concerns by other towns, and made a comparison between them and Hyattsville. He urged that every citizen take an interest in the welfare of the town. Other speakers of the evening were Mr. an interest in the welfare of the town.

Other speakers of the evening were Mr.

Jackson Raiston of this place, well known in Washington, and Mr. Frank B. Metzerott of Washington.

President Dunning announced at the close of the meeting that the officials of the board of trade were making efforts to have another meeting for the general public in the near future.

A number of the young ladies and gentle-men of this town are forming a musical organization, which will be known as the Hyattsville Mandolin Club. There is also to be formed here a progressive euchreclub. The young people expect to hold a meeting soon, when the club will be organized and officers elected.

ADMIRAL EVANS' NARRATIVE

WHAT HE SAW OF THE BROOKLYN'S

Experience During the Battle of July 3, 1898-Coaling Possibillities

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans continued his testimony before the Schley court of inquiry yesterday afternoon until adjournment.

Describing the battle off Santiago, July 3. 1898, Admiral Evans said: "When Cervera's fleet came out of Santiago harbor the Iowa was at the center, with the Brooklyn to the left and the Texas between." Judge Advocate Lemly: "Do you remember what vessels were between them?" "The only vessel between the Iowa and the Brooklyn was the Texas." "Did you have an opportunity of observing the movements of the Brooklyn on this occasion?" "You mean during the battle?"

"I mean the beginning of the battle." The Brooklyn's Loop.

"I saw the Brooklyn when the fight be gan. When I reached the bridge of the Iowa the Brooklyn was still off to the westward, headed, I should say, northeast. That was just as the fight began. I saw her again possibly five minutes afterward, when she was steaming eastward very fast, firing her port battery, headed northeast, toward the head of the Spanish column. I did not see the Brooklyn again until my attention was directed to her by the navigator calling to me, 'Look out, captain, for Texas!" I went on the port bridge, where the navigator was standing, and I said, 'Where the devil is the Texas?' The said, 'Where the devil is the Texas?' The navigator said: 'Here she is, sir, in the smoke.' I said to myself, 'Captain Philip occasions. However, the signal saying that will look after the Texas,' and went below. In a few minutes the navigator called out again: 'Look out, captain, you will run into the Texas!' I walked over to the port side of the bridge and saw the Brooklyn's smoke stack and military masts. She was lying directly across the bows of the The Texas was apparently backing and dangerously close to the Iowa. The Brooklyn seemed to be 100 yards directly in front of the Texas. I eased the helm of the Iowa a little, ported her helm a little, and just at that moment the Oregon came through my lee and passed between me and the Texas, and the three boats were Conversation With Commodore Schley Mr. Rayner, cross-questioning Admiral Evans, asked if he had seen the official chart showing the positions of the Brooklyn and other battle ships on the day of the battle off Santiago, July 3, 1898. The admiral replied that he had seen the chart, but that it was wrong.

Mr. Rayner: "When did you first know about the turn of the Brooklyn, as you say, a short distance from the Texas?"

"Do you recollect the conversation you had with Commodore Schley the 5th of

"You do not recollect that Commodore Schley first told you on July 5 that it was the Brooklyn and not the Texas that made

"I never imagined anything of the sort ' "Give briefly the purport of your conver-sation on that date with Commodore

"Briefly, as I recollect the conversation, he was talking to a person named Graham. He was sitting at his desk writing. I walked into his cabin to make a report.

He put his hand on my shoulder and said: 'Bobby, I am just writing my report of the battle of the 3d of July.' He said: 'I have said of you that you handled your ship with consummate skill.' Then he intro-duced me to Mr. Graham. Then Captain Cook came in and asked me if I would tell him whether the position of certain Spanish ships was correct, which came out first, etc.; that he had been a little confused in his mind. We talked a few minutes, and I then went into Captain Cook's cabin." Position of the Brooklyn.

"You do not recollect the conversation going over the particulars of the turn that the Brooklyn made, and the remark that Commedore Schley made at that time about Captain Philip, when you said you thought it was Captain Philip of the Texas who made the turn?" "I never said that. Absolutely, I never said such a thing, because the Texas was right under my eye all the time. She never turned at all."

Concerning the position of the Brooklyn and the Texas on the day of the battle the witness said: "The Brooklyn was danger-ously near the Texas. I should say within 100 vards of her."

"What was your position just at that time when she crossed the course of the Texas relative to the Brooklyn and the Texas?

"The Iowa was heading straight in for the Spanish fleet, to intercept the Viscaya, at that time. She was heading more to the northward than the Texas. The Texas was at that time. She was heading more to the northward than the Texas. The Texas was headed off more to the west. When I saw the Brooklyn the third time she was across the bow of the Texas, heading south."

"When did you see her next, if at all?"

"After the Oquendo went ashore my attention was called to the Brooklyn by some one on the bridge, who remarked: The Brooklyn is knocked out.' She was then hotly engaged with her starboard battery. She was headed parallel with the course of the Colon, I should say."

Mr. Rayner questioned the witness again with reference to statements made in his (Admiral Evans') book, asking him whether he had ever said he felt reasonably sure that the Spanish fleet was in the harbor at Santiago. The witness said that he had made that statement, but that it was a conclusion based on the fact that the Spaniards were not at Clenfuegos; that they had not gone westward, and that from a military point of view Santiago was the place where they were most apt to be.

"That was simply your opinion, then, and not a matter of information?" suggested Mr. Rayner; to which the witness replied in the affirmative. Mr. Rayner then remarked that he had never before entirely understood upon what the admiral had based his statements.

"I think you did." said the admiral.

"I assure you I had never read it before," responded Mr. Rayner.

"You have read it three times to me."

Admiral Dewey-"Remarks will be confined to questions and answers." Admiral Evans then, in response to a question from Mr. Rayner, said that he had been called to the deck of the Iowa on the evening of July 2 by Lieutenant Hill, was the deck officer, and who had called his attention to columns of smoke rising from the entrance to the harbor. The lieucen ant had remarked that it was his opinion that the Spaniards were preparing to come out, but he, Admiral Evans, expressed the

He asked:

Order of Battle. "Under what instruction, verbal, written or by signal from the flagship Brooklyn did you maneuver the Iowa during the naval battle of Santiago July 3, 1898?" "I never saw any signal from her. I did not maneuver in obedience to any signal from the Brooklyn. I did not see any signals aboard her." Or any written or verbal instructions? "None whatever." "What instruction, oral or written, did you have from Commodore Schley relative to the order of blockade or order of battle

"There were no lights shown on the fly-ing squadron on blockade, except I believe did have a light on the stern of

"Was the fire of the enemy's batteries on the 31st heavy enough to seriously endanger the attacking ship?"
"No, sir; it was not heavy at all. The projectiles mostly fell a long way short of us. Two, I think, passed over my ship."
"In the attack on the Colon on May 31 did any of the enemy's shot fall near the squadron? "Two, I think, fell near the Iowa." The Coaling Question.

"Would it have been possible for the Iowa to coal from the Merrimac early in the afternoon of May 26?" "It would have been."
